While the Formula One season officially began at the Austrian Grand Prix on July 5, the schedule for the remainder of the year is starting to fill up, with 17 races officially on the calendar for the 2020 season, with Abu Dhabi officially ending the year again. Originally scheduled to show a record 22 races, the F1 season was lopped by only 13, given the impact of the coronavirus pandemic on the sporting world. Formula 1 had 15 races either cancelled, postponed or pending for the remainder of the year. The original Dutch Grand Prix was slated to make a comeback after an absence of 35 years, but the GP has unfortunately been hit, one of seven officially cancelled this year. But a return to the shortened season is Bahrain Bahrain The Prix at Istanbul Park, the first track to be held since 2011.Five races have been postponed but no makeup dates have been announced. The theme of the week, enter the Abu Dhabi Grand Prix: Heartbreak. It's not just heartbreaking that Formula 1 season comes to an end this Sunday, but it's heartbreaking for George Russell: His brief but magnificent brush with greatness landed him in points - the first of his F1 career - but away from the podium where he was seemingly destined to be. A punctured tire and a chaotic Mercedes pit stop ended Russell's chance at fame and one of the best sports stories of the year. It is also heartbreaking to see that Romain Grosjean, despite his earlier desire to get back behind the wheel of a car in 2020, will not race in Abu Dhabi due to an abundance of caution following his accident in the Bahrain Grand Prix. Lewis Hamilton's status is currently unknown but he appears to be improving and ready to return to his No 44 car this weekend. If not, Russell gets another opportunity for Mercedes in 2020.MORE: Watch Formula 1 live with fuboTV (7-day free trial)Season 2020 was also numb to Sebastian Vettel: Although Vettel has a place in 2021 (Aston Martin Racing, formerly known as Racing Point), at the end of his productive career with Scuderia Ferrari coming with a spray and not flourishing. For the first time since 2008, Vettel will finish outside the top five on the driver's points, just a year after finishing fifth and two years after finishing second. Despite all the sadness, maybe the real 2021 F1 season was the friends we made along the way. Or something like that. The organization wanted a slate of 15-18 races for its 2020 season, and it looks to have succeeded. We currently expect the first races to be closed events, but hope that fans will be able to join our events again when it is safe to do so. F1 said in June. The health and safety of all participants will continue to be the number one priority, with Formula 1 and the FIA having a reliable and detailed plan to ensure our races maintain a high level of safety with strict procedures in place.
